Give To The Christmas Seal Campaign

Not whimpers, but coughs, will mark the end of life as we know it, says Eddie Albert, actor, environmental activist and National Honorary Christmas Seal Chairman.

Dr. Ray A. Moore, Jr., Chairman of the Central Virginia Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association's Medical Advisory Committee, said the movie and TV star agreed to spearhead the 1972 effort against emphysema, TB and air pollution because he's convinced dirty air threatens human survival. He also is a practical man who thinks the American public deserves more for the time, effort and money put into modern technology than the staggering debt caused by smog.

"Some say the cost of cleaning up the enviroment is too high", Albert says. "Well, what does it cost when the breadwinner of the family is stricken with emphysema? What's $30 for a smog control device on the car, when we're paying $400 million a year for emphysema and chronic bronchitis?"

That figure, explains Dr. Moore, represents only Social Security disability payments for the two lung diseases. There's no accurate way to total the costs of medical care and the loss in human productivity and human pleasure and projected figures defy imagination.

Although it's not a pretty story, Albert frequently tells this anecdote to illustrate the threat of dirty air. "I was driving to the studio not long ago, bumper to bumper, inhaling all those gases, and the radio news announcer reported that a young woman had been murdered the night before in the Hollywood hills. The authorities hadn't been able to identify the body, but they knew she'd been in Los Angeles only a short time. While I was wondering how they knew that, without knowing who she was the announcer explained that the autopsy revealed her lungs were clear. Anyone who has lived in Los Angeles for a period of time has black or blackening, lungs."

Although Albert believes prime responsibility for cleaning up the air rests with the federal government, he says the private citizen must not be elbowed out of the decision making. He sees this as a major role of the Christmas Seal Association and other concerned citizen groups.

"It's often argued that we have too many agencies interested in the same problem", he says, "but many major public health challenges benefit greatly from more than one line of attack. Until we have absolute solutions, who can be certain that we are doing enough?"

One way of doing more, Albert suggests, is to learn as much as possible about air pollution and health. Information is available free from the Central Virginia TB and RD Association in Farmville, Virginia. Informed citizens, he says, can support laws and lawmakers who are dedicated to clearning up the environment.

Another way is by giving more to the Christmas Seal Campaign. It is, Albert says, a matter of life and breath.

People work for people, not for companies. A worker's regard for his supervisor will affect his opinion of his employer. Production is related to attitude, so much so that an organization which disregards this human equation will not achieve as much as it could achieve. —Gerard R. Griffin

A FABLE

And it came to pass that two young fleas fell in love, and after a short courtship, married and settled down. They found a large, good-natured and inactive dog for a home.

Theirs was truly an ideal life. Food, shelter and heat were provided. There was a housing unit were provided. There was a housing unit in every wrinkle. Life was sweet and easy. All they did was eat, sleep and multiply.

Freedom from want and fear had been attained, and they and their offspring enjoyed the abundant life.

But the patient old dog, sore and unappreciated, grew weak and weary. Unable any longer to support the hungry and rapidly multiplying, non-productive population, he finally staggered off into the woods and died.

Consternation reigned among the fleas. They had meetings protesting that the economic system had let them down. Some even threatened to vote for the other party. There was talk of suing the old dog for lack of cooperation.

Many of those panicky parasites perished on the spot. Others, bitter in spirit, trudged off into the cruel world and died by the roadside, trying to thumb a ride on another dog. None thought of shifting for themselves.

Now the moral of this little story is that if too many people depend on society, industry or government to look after them, to provide them with security, they may end in want and distress amid the wreckage of a nation.

Men must never forget that there is no substitute for self-reliance, individual striving and thrift to provide for their future needs.

How Old Is Mrs. Billy Boy?

Down through the ages and up until present day, speaking of a Lady's age has been and still is a mighty delicate subject, and one must tip toe lightly when engaged in such dangerous talk. However, I would like to know why it is that so many ladies who were at that "None of your business age" yesterday are applying for Social Security today. When they reach that "none of your business age" they dive in to the misty waters, to swim under the proverbial bridge, and to mysteriously emerge in the calm "Social Security Waters" at precisely the right moment. I know more ladies between the ages of 106 and 107 than I do between 26 and 65. They seem to have an unwritten agreement not to reveal each other's ages during those fragile years.

My "none of your business age" wife and I were discussing the old song "Billy Boy", which goes kinda like this.

Where have you been Billy Boy, Billy Boy?

Where have you been charming Billy

I've been to see my wife, She's the beauty of my life, She's a young thing and can not leave her mother. (THIS VERSE MY WIFE REMEMBERED).

Can she bake a cherry pie, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?

Can she bake a cherry pie, charming Billy

She can bake a cherry pie Quick as a cat can wink his eye She's a young thing and can not leave her mother. THIS SHE ALSO REMEMBERED)

How old is she Billy Boy, Billy Boy?

How old is she, charming Billy. — (THIS MY WIFE SAYS SHE FORGOT)

Can any of you gentlemen readers inform us the age of Mrs. Billy Boy?

While the man of the house is recalling the lady's age will you girls be thinking up some kind words for my epitaph? I'll surely need them if my wife ever reads this epistle.

State and Federal damage assessment teams are continuing to assess damage in the areas not yet approved as disaster areas to determine eligibility for Federal assistance.

People Underestimate Social Security Payment

People tend to underestimate the monthly benefits social security can pay. According to a recent survey, only one person in 25 gave the correct answer to this question:

"Let's take a man 35 years old, with a wife and two young children and average earnings of about $500 a month. If he became disabled and couldn't work any more, about how much do you think he and his family would get from social security? Or if he died, how much do you think his wife and children would get? (Just a rough guess.)"

The question was put to a sampling of people 18 and over across the Nation. The correct answer is about $500 a month, according to social security officials here.

"But three out of four people guessed the social security payments would be $350 a month or less," a spokesman said. "More than half guessed $250 or less. One out of four guessed $150 or less."

Social security pays monthly disability benefits to eligible workers and their families if the worker is severely disabled and cannot work for a year or more.

Survivors benefits are payable to certain family members if the worker dies. A worker's benefit amount is based on his average earnings covered by social security over a period of years.

"If a 35-year-old worker becomes disabled in 1972," the spokesman said, "he and his family could be eligible for disability payments if he had worked in jobs covered by social security for 5 of the 10 years before he became disabled."

If the worker died, the spokesman said, his wife and children could start getting payments from social security if he had worked 1½ years during the 3 years before he died in work covered by social security.

"A woman who works is building similar protection for herself and her family," he said.
